Diane is the Investment Strategist for Invesco, one of the world's largest independent global asset management firms. In her role as Investment Strategist, she directs the firm's Global Investment Solutions and Research team ('GISR'). GISR is charged with creating thought leadership throughout the entire Invesco franchise with an emphasis on the strategic clients. Rather than focus on any one particular investment product, GISR produces macro-level research which acts as the cornerstone for an interactive dialogue with our clients.

Garnick works closely with Chief Executive Officers, Chief Investment Officers, and Trustees to ensure they understand the implications of their investment decisions prior to implementing them. In this role she can often be seen authoring 'how to' educational reports and giving seminars on investment topics. Garnick's approach has been described as 'translating math into English' as she is best known for bringing complex investment theories into the reach of many decision makers. Her tireless efforts have helped improve the risk-return profile of countless plans.

6996-11/08

Prior to joining Invesco Garnick was a Global Derivatives Strategist at Merrill Lynch where she and her team were named to the Institutional Investor All Star Team. Garnick has published hundreds of reports that focus on portfolio construction, volatility, corporate actions, equity indices, exchange traded funds ("ETFs"), futures, options, accounting and taxation.

Garnick earned her degree in accounting at Hofstra University and is a Certified Public Accountant. Garnick is one of the growing number of Wall Street executives who have transitioned from being a financier to a philanthropist. Diane is the founder of the Ladies in Red, a charitable organization focused on charities geared towards solving issues faced by underprivileged children and women throughout the world.
